ROBBERY.

On the night of the 6th of December, 1816, the Exchange Office of the subscriber, Bridge street, Georgetown, from appearances by a false key, was robbed of the following property, in Specie, consisting of dollars, change, American and English gold, about 200 dollars; bank notes, mostly three dollar notes of the bank of Washington, and some small tickets, together about 30 dollars, a one pound note of the bank of England, and one hundred and sixty four lottery tickets as per numbers below. From the Albany Daily Advertiser.

The origin of the Indians.

We are much gratified to learn, from the following article, that the source from whence the original inhabitants of this country were derived, has at length been discovered. Dr. Mitchill, who, first or last, hunts up every thing in the arts and sciences, has found out the very nest where the first brood was hatched. He seems to think that they are made up of almost as many sorts of people, as there were different kinds of animals in the Ark. Laplanders, Norwegians, Fins, Welshmen, &c. &c. form the ingredients of which Indians and Squaws were made. How the discovery has been made, we pretend not to know. In the improved state of chemical science, it may have been the fact, that by a careful analysis, and decomposition, the original drugs have been detected. Whether the learned Doctor has taken one of the natives to pieces to see how he was made we have not been informed.

Another important fact is disclosed in this article. "The forts and other antiquities at Onondago," are found to be of a Danish character.' This idea was suggested to Doct. Mitchell by Mr. Clinton and the Doct. says "in the twinkling of an eye he was penetrated by the justness of the remark. An additional window of light was opened to him." We should like to know whether the Doct. ever was furnished with a window of darkness. Had Mr. Clinton suggested to the Dr. that he suspected the Onondago forts were of Hottentot origin, we have not a doubt he would have been penetrated quite as suddenly, as he was on the other suggestion.

There is one mystery at Onondago, which yet remains unexplained, and to which we hope the learned Professer will as early as possible turn his attention, and that is, the origin of the salt, which is so abundantly found in that region.—If he has room in his scientific edifice for another "window of light," we respectfully suggest to him for consideration and investigation, whether it is not probable that some of the wandering tribes who first peopled that part of the country, brought over Lot's wife with them, and planted her down there for public use, and in that way laid the foundation of that valuable supply of so important a necessary of life? Many people have supposed that the Indians were derived from the Hebrews. There is certainly a strong resemblance in the language and customs of some of the tribes to those of that people. Now, if among the varieties of mixture in the Aborigines, there, is in fact, a portion of Hebrew, as they always were a money making race, what is more probable than that they took up the old lady from the neighbourhood of the Dead Sea, where we are told in the Apocrypha she stood a long time after her transformation, and brought her over here for the purpose of making a speculation. The idea is only suggested—the Doct. can make what use of it he pleases. It has at least about as plausible a foundation as the story of Madoc and the Danes.

"All this may be considered correct as far as the Tartars and Malays are concerned. But there is another part of the American population which deserves to be particularly considered, I mean the emigrants from Lapland, Norway, and Finland, who, before the tenth century, settled themselves in Greenland, and passed over to Labrador. It is recorded that these adventurers settled themselves in a country which they called Vinland. This was probably a new settlement, so called in honor of Finland the region whence the adventurers came. Or if it was a land of Vines, the proof is the stronger of their southern encampment.

Our learned regent, Mr. De Witt Clinton who has out done Governor Colden, by writing the most full and able history of the Iroquois, or Five nations of New-York, mentioned to me in a late conversation, his belief that a part of the old forts and other antiquities at Onondago and the adjacent territory, were of Danish character. In the twinkling of an eye, I was penetrated by the justness of his remark. An additional window of light was suddenly opened to me. I told him in an instant how I could follow, with the Rev. pastor Van Troil, the European emigrants, during the horrible commotions of the ninth and tenth centuries, to Iceland. The Rev. Mr. Crantz had informed, me, in his important book, how they went to Greenland. I thought I could trace the people of Scandinavia, to the banks of the St. Lawrence. I supposed my friends had seen the Frunic inscriptions made by them here and there, in the places where they rested. Madoc, Prince of Wales, and his Cambrian followers, appeared, to my recollection, among these bands of adventurers. And thus the north-eastern lands of North America, were visited by the hyperborean tribes from the northwesternmost climates of Europe; and the northwestern climates of North America had received inhabitants of the same race from the northeastern regions of Asia.

The Danes, or Finns, (and Welshmen for I am willing to include them) performing her migrations gradually to the southwest, seem to have penetrated to the country situated south of Lake Ontario, and to have fortified themselves there. The Tartars or Samoieds, travelling by slow degrees from Alaska to the west, probably found them there.

In their course these Asian colonists probably exterminated the Malays, who had penetrated along the Ohio and its streams or drove them to the caverns abounding in salt petre and copperas in Kentucky and Tennessee, were their bodies, accompanied with the clothes and ornaments of their peculiar manufacture, have been repeatedly disinterred and brought to us for examination.

Think, what a memorable spot is Onondago—where men of the Malay race from the southwest, and of the Tartar blood, from the northwest, and of the Gothic stock from the northeast, have successively contended for supremacy and rule, and which may be considered as having been possessed by each before the French, the Dutch, or the English visited the tract, or indeed knew any thing whatever about it.

We learn from the historian Charlevoix, that the Eries an indigenous nation of the Malay race, formerly inhabited the lands south of Lake Erie, where the western district of Pennsylvania and the state of Ohio now are. And Lewis Evans, a former resident of this city has shown us, in his map of the middle colonies, that the hunting grounds of the Iroquois extended love that very region. The Iroquois were of the Tartar stock, and they converted as it seems the country of the exterminated Eries into a range for Beavers, Bears, Bisons & deer.

The antiquarian of America will probably find that the Scandinavians emigrated about the tenth century of the Christian area if not earlier.

They may be considered, not merely as having discovered this continent, but to have explored the northern climes to great extent, and to have peopled them three or four hundred years before Christopher Columbus was born.—The enquirer into this subject will not fail to trace the swarms from the great hive of nations existing to the eastward of the Caspian sea, in a manner very different from that which the writers of Europe and their imitators have persued, as the Barbarians descended upon the more warm and productive countries of the south. He will follow the hordes journeying by land to the eastward, and he will trace the fearless boatman venturing over sea to the westward, until the Tartar and the Samoied met each other at the antipodes. He will find this antipodal region to lie south of the Lakes Ontario and Erie and thereon pursue the vestiges of their combats, their conflicts, and their untold story, to Onondaga, the great head quarters of the victorious Iroquois.

Peter Duffie,
vs.
George Mathewson, Richard Clark, James M'Night, John Markwell, Edward Craw, George Jenkins, William Askew, Thomas Maxwell and Daniel Marshall.

Caines, Counsel for the Plaintiff,
Fay, Counsel for the Defendants.

The captain and crew of a vessel on the high seas, have no right to permit or excite old Neptune to have a passenger and immerse him in a tub of water contrary to his will.

This was an action of assault and battery, alledged to have been committed on board the British ship Thomas, of Lancaster, while on the high seas, of which ship Mathewson was the captain, the other defendants, seamen, and the plaintiff one of the passengers.

It appeared that the ship came from the chalky cliffs of Albion, with a number of passengers, and arrived on the banks of Newfoundland. The sons of the deity who rules the wide domain, through which they had past in safety, with joy beaming in every eye, met and conferred. By a recurrence to ancient legends, coeval with the common law, and among them, of greater validity, it was found that as often as landsmen came in view of the Banks, before them, he must produce a bottle of Cogniac or rum, as an acceptable sacrifice to Neptune.

The nature of the sacrifice was explained to the landsmen, and the greater part complied with a requisition, sanctioned by immemorial usage; the defendants with others, refused.

Whereupon the seamen invoked the god, with sad complaints: "Oh! omnipotent father, king of the ocean, behold the rebellious sons of Terra, who have dared to intrude into thy dominions, refusing to bend before thy divine will, and so render to thee an accustomed libation. Their beards, O father! prolong, uncouth and indecent, retained by them in defiance of thy laws, and in derision of thy divinity."

The father of ocean heard, and lifted his awful head sublime above the waves, attended by the Tritons, the Nereides and all the daughters of the azure main.

He sat, his children and thus responded to their complaints. through a brazen trumpet, whose reverberations shook the distant promontory of Chapeau Rouge, and re echoed through the spacious bay of Placentia.—"Carry these impious mortals from my presence—behold their beards, which they dare to retain in despite of my authority. They shall be shaved."

The captain and crew of a vessel on the high seas, have no right to permit or excite old Neptune to have a passenger and immerse him in a tub of water, contrary to his will.

This was an action of assault and battery, alledged to have been committed on board the British ship Thomas, of Lancaster, while on the high seas, of which ship Mathewson was the captain, the other defendants, seamen, and the plaintiff one of the passengers.

The nature of the sacrifice was explained to the landsmen, and the greater part complied with a requisition, sanctioned by immemorial usage; the defendant, with others, refused.

Whereupon the seamen invoked the god, with sad complaints: "Oh! omnipotent father, king of the ocean, behold the rebellious sons of Terra, who have dared to intrude into thy dominions, refusing to bend before thy divine altar, and so render to thee an accustomed libation. Their beards, O father! prolong, uncouth and indecent, retained by them in defiance of thy laws, and in derision of thy divinity."

The father of ocean heard, and lifted his awful head sublime above the waves, attended by the Tritons, the Nereides and all the daughters of the azure main.

He sa / his children and thus responded to their complaints, through a brazen trumpet, whose reverberations shook the distant promontory of Chapeau Rouge, and re echoed through the spacious bay of Placentia.—"Carry these impious mortals from my presence—behold their beards, which they dare to retain in despite of my authority. They shall be shaved."

"Sic fata ainant."

He said and taking his razor and shaving box from his car, while Amphitrite held his horses, he seized the prow and ascended by the head rails into the lofty ship. His presence inspired his children with joy. But while imparting his commands, through his brazen trumpet, to the crew, the landsmen below trembled. "Bring hither that tub, and fill it with sea water." 'Twas done. "Bring forth the long bearded tribe, one by one." The command was obeyed—but Duffie, when it came to his turn, was inclined to be refractory, and resisted; but who can resist, when gods command?

The razor used by his godship, was manufactured in the caverns of Aetna, by one of the Cyclops, from an iron hoop; and though somewhat rough on the edge, did good business.

Held above the tub, Duffie underwent the operation with streaming eye, while the most unsavoury smell from the lather entered his nostrils. As soon as the office of the razor was accomplished and the awful oath, which binds even Gods below, was administered, the tub below received him; the ceremony was done and the god descended into the bosom of the "vasty deep."

It appeared that a lady passenger, named Ann Jones, was subjected to the same ceremony, the humor of which was enjoyed by Duffie, in common with the others. Markwell personated Neptune, and the captain acted in the capacity of assistant to the deity, and was aiding, abetting and assisting in the ceremony.*

After the arguments of the counsel, Mr. Justice Swanton charged the Jury, that it was the duty of the master of a ship, to treat his passengers with attention and politeness. The captain stood in the same relation to the passengers, as a master of a hotel or an inn did to his guests. Having the superintendance of his vessel, the law had invested the capt. with the authority necessary for preserving peace and good order.

On this occasion, the captain not only failed in treating the plaintiff with a becoming decorum, but countenanced and actually had some agency in the injury charged in the declaration. The conduct of the defendants towards the plaintiff, was highly reprehensible. After taking into consideration the wounded feelings of the plaintiff on the one hand, and the circumstances of the defendants on the other, it would be the duty of the jury to render such a verdict as they considered just and equitable.

The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, for 3 46.

*Whenever a vessel arrives on the equator or any remarkable head land, where the raw hands or passengers have not been before, the seamen, according to an old usage, frequently proceed to the ceremony of shaving, which is thus performed; one of the crew, who is best calculated for drollery, is habited in a fantastic, ridiculous manner, and, with a speaking trumpet in his hand, personates old Neptune. He goes forward to the bow of the vessel, while those who are to be shaved, are kept below, and descends until perhaps, he reaches the water and from thence ascends on deck, pretending to have emerged from the ocean. He hails his crew with his trumpet; answer is made, and mutual congratulations pass between his godship and the old seamen. He proceeds to order the requisite apparatus for shaving, which generally consists of a piece of iron hoop, a composition for lather made of slush and other offensive matters and a tub of water. The persons who are to be shaved, are then brought on deck, one by one blindfolded. Those who have treated well, are shaved light, while those who are refractory are shaved hard. After shaving his godship proceeds to swear the novice to divers singular observance, one of which is, that he "will never eat brown bread when he can eat white"

The one shaved, is then either immersed in a tub of water, or has a bucket full from above, poured on his head and the frolic ends.

ALEXANDRIA

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 19.

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT AT WASHINGTON.

December 18.

A bill to incorporate the Columbian Insurance Company of Alexandria was read yesterday; and another bill was brought in by the chairman of the committee of claims to amend, or I might almost say, of repeal—the bill past last session authorizing payment for property lost, captured or destroyed by the enemy. This bill takes the whole out of the hands of the commission and places the power of examining claims in the war department. It was grounded on a report from the committee of claims, censuring the decisions of the commissioner.

Mr. Pickens's plan for an alteration in the constitution was brought this day under the consideration of a committee of the whole, on the state of the nation, when Mr. Pickens made some observations on the subject, the amount of which I will endeavour briefly to give you. He said, that of the various operations of government, there was none that in sound policy, more imperiously demanded to be placed on a stable footing and secured from liability to fluctuation, than the right of suffrage, for by that means only could it resist the attacks of the artful and ambitious, and consequently secure the confidence of the people; and thus the certainty of its operation would insure the purity of its exercise. Aware that innovation on the constitution ought to be avoided, he endeavoured to shew that this resolution had no tendency to graft a new principle upon that instrument, but barely prescribe a new mode of exercising a long established right—a right that had been often exercised in that very way before intrigue had tainted the purity of election. One of the great recommendations of this new plan was that by making the mode of election uniform in all parts of the Union, and equal at all times it would be understood by all men in every section of the Union, and be grasped and protected against inroad by the people, become permanent by their affection for it, and grow more respected and venerable from age. It would bring every citizen to a nearer acquaintance with the candidates and make the delegation of power immediately from the constituents to their representatives instead of being transferred at second hand to persons little or perhaps not at all known to the constituents by a caucus nomination of the states, or by a legislative or congressional caucus. As in every state there were a variety of sentiments, this division into small districts would afford to all our citizens an opportunity of expressing themselves, and give to every man the fullest means of making known his will: thus jealousies & doubts would be extinguished, the feelings and sentiments of the people would be amalgamated. Animosities would gradually disappear, and each be satisfied with the conviction that he had the full and fair exercise of his right. Corruption would be rendered impracticable, whilst every man was the immediate disposer of his own trust and would know the person to whom he was about to confide it.

The objection to the plan was, that the second branch of it, that is, touching the election of President [see paper of last] was an invasion of the constitution: but against the first branch there seemed to be no objection on that account. However, as the proposition was of importance and thought deserving of consideration, it was proposed to give the house time to reflect upon it, and to that end the committee rose and reported progress and obtained leave to sit again.

"It may be the pride and pleasure of an American, to ask, What farmer, what mechanic, what laborer, ever sees a tax-gatherer of the United States?"—This was the flattering unction which Mr. Jefferson applied to the hearts of the people and by which he multiplied the disciples of his school. It allured immense shoals of fishes into the net of democracy. Economy was the talismanic word. A rigid money saving economy was to be observed in all the departments of the government. Supernumerary officers were to be lopped away. The salaries of officers were to be moderate. A strict and universal accountability, in regard to the expenditure of public money, was to be maintained. The government was to be truly republican, in point of plainness, frugality, and the absence of that costly pomp which distinguishes the courts of monarchs. In short, we were to have a cheap government; a government, whose charges would scarcely be felt by the people. This was, from year to year, the sing-song of Mr. Jefferson, and of the prominent characters of his party. It was the standing theme of the newspapers devoted to their cause. While they teemed with invectives against the prodigal waste of former times, they announced a new era, distinguished for incorruptness, frugality, and republican simplicity.

Fifteen years have elapsed since democracy began its career with these flattering promises; and the burthens of the people are now more than quadrupled. The farmer, the mechanic, the laborer, every man but the houseless and naked mendicant, sorely feels the griping hand of the tax-gatherer. And are they commisserated by their deceivers? Not at all. Basking in high places, they are as merry as grigs. They have even cast off their visors. They speak with the pride of princes, and as though the people were made for them.

Take, for example, Governor Wright, of Maryland. He is an old democrat; one of the elders of that community; one who, in zeal for national economy, had been scarcely behind the great sage himself. On the compensation bill, or the bill giving double pay to congressmen, Gov. Wright rises in his place and speaks. And does he express any fellow feeling for the people, so heavily loaded with burthens which he himself had helped to bring upon them? Does he talk of economy, and exhort congress to be content with their wages, considering that the times are hard? Not he. It is thus that the economist and patriot, the once people loving Governor Wright, speaks now. He says, that "members of congress ought to live like gentlemen." "That they ought to have pay enough to drink good wine, and to ride out to congress hall in carriages." "That they ought to be able to take their families with them to congress, and the public should bear the expense."

The lovers of fine dancing will be highly gratified at the theatre this evening. The inducements to attend are very considerable—as the bill of fare presents a variety of elegant dances seldom practised in this country. The performers are Europeans, who have crossed the Atlantic with the fond expectation of receiving in this country that patronage which the known liberality of our citizens would lead them to expect. Public Sale.

WILL be sold, at public auction, on Tuesday the 7th day of January next, being the second day of Prince-William Court; at the late residence of Alexander Henderson, of Dumfries; all the personal property at the mansion house. It is useless to enumerate it particularly, but amongst many other articles are such as follow:

A large quantity of bedding of superior quality: a piano: an elegant violin: a new fashionable carriage with plated harness and a pair of horses: 3 milch cows: 40 or 50 hams of prime old bacon: valuable carpeting: tea ware and glass ware, etc. etc.

On this property a credit of 9 months will be given, the purchaser giving bond and security, bearing interest from the date if not paid punctually.

Five slaves are for sale, viz. a first rate female cook, a likely well tutored girl of 14, a young man of good character a rough blacksmith, and two valuable farming negro men, one about 25 the other about 35 years old. The one about 25, to be sold as near Fauquier court-house as may be, to be near his wife, and the other for a like reason near Leesburg Inman Horner, Esq. will sell the youngest. These people may be seen at Dumfries till the day of sale, and on that day, but will not be publicly exposed—the executor does not deal with foreign purchaser or their agents—they need not call, and are asked not to do so. Cash will be asked for the servants.

The dwelling house itself with its appurtenances will be sold on very moderate and accommodating terms. The house is spacious and convenient; the out houses are good, and the garden prepared with great labor and taste, so as to be at once remarkably productive and handsome. The society of the village is very agreeable and a bargain may be had in this property.

acting executor of Alex. Henderson deceased.

JAMES KENNEDY & SON,

BOOKSELLERS, KING STREET,

Have just received from LEE'S PATENT MEDICINE Store, No. 46 Maiden Lane, N. York,

A FRESH SUPPLY

Of the following genuine Medicines.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers, is recommended

Hahn's Anti-Bilious Pills.

THIS Medicine has been attended with a degree of success highly grateful to the inventor's feelings, in several parts of the West Indies, and the Southern & Middle States, particularly in N. York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Petersburg, Richmond, Norfolk, Edenton, Wilmington, Charleston, and Savannah. The testimony of a number of persons at each of the above places can be adduced, who have reason to believe, that a timely use of this salutary remedy has, under Providence, preserved their lives, when in the most alarming circumstances.

Facts of this conclusive nature speak more in favour of a medicine than columns of pompous eulogy, founded on mere assertion.

It is not, indeed, presumptuously proposed as an infallible cure, but the inventor has every possible reason that can result from extensive experience, for believing that a dose of these Pills, taken once in every two weeks, during the prevalence of our bilious fevers, will prove an infallible preventative; and further, that in the earlier stages of those diseases, their use will very generally succeed in restoring health, and frequently in cases esteemed desperate, and beyond the power of common remedies.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild, so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to cary off superfluous bile & prevent its morbid secretions—to restore & amend the appetite—to produce a free perspiration and thereby prevent colds which is so often of fatal consequences. A dose never fails to remove a cold it taken on its first appearance—they are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head-ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficatious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

HAMILTON'S WORM DESTROYING LOZENGES.

Which have cured an immense number of persons of both sexes, of every age, and in every situation, of various dangerous complaints arising from worms, and from obstructions orfoulness in their stomach and bowels.

This medicine bears no analogy whatever to others of similar titles so commonly complained of, as operating with violence; on the contrary, a particular excellence of this remedy is its being suited to every age and constitution. It contains nothing but what is perfectly innocent, and is also mild in its operation, cannot injure the most delicate pregnant lady or the tenderest infant of a week old, should no worms exist in the body; but will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels, of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms, and many fatal disorders. The lozenges are particularly efficacious in carrying off all gross humours and eruptions, feverish and bilious complaints, and are the safest and mildest purgative that can be used on any occasion.

DESCRIPTION OF WORMS.

And the symptoms by which they are known:

Worms which infest the human body, are chiefly of four kinds, viz.—The Teres, or large round worm; the Ascarides, or small maw-worm; the Cucurbitina, or short, flat, white worm; and lastly, the Tienia, or tape-worm, so called from its resemblance to tape. This is often many yards long, and is full of joints. It is most hurtful and most difficult to remove.

Among the symptoms attending worms are—disagreeable breath, especially in the morning; bad and corrupted gums; itching in the nose, and about the seat; convulsions, epileptic fits, and sometimes privation of speech; starting and grinding of the teeth in sleep; irregular appetite, sometimes loathing food, and sometimes voracious; purging, with slimy & fœtid stools; vomiting; large and hard belly; pains and sickness at the stomach; slow fever, with small and irregular pulse; a dry cough; excessive thirst; sometimes pale and unhealthy countenance, and sometimes the face coated and flushed.

Persons afflicted with any of the above symptoms, should have immediate recourse to Hamilton's Worm Destroying Lozenges, which have been constantly attended with success, in all complaints similar to those above described.

A dose of this medicine given occasionally during the warm season, will effectually prevent 'the vomiting and purging of chint'—a dreadful disorder, which annually destroys the hands of the infant part of our citizens it is likewise the mildest and most certain emedy known, and has restored to health and strength a great number, when in an advanced stage of this fatal complaint. Particular and plain instructions are given for every part of the necessary treatment in such cases.

Children generally take this medicine with eagerness; having a pleasing appearance, and an agreeable taste.

The Persian Lotion operates mildly, without impeding the natural, insensible perspiration, which is essential to health, yet its effects are speedy and permanent, rendering the skin delicately soft and smooth and improving the complexion.

The Restorative Powder for the teeth and Gums.

This excellent preparation comforts and strengthens the gums, preserves the enamel from decay, and cleanses and whitens the teeth, by absorbing all the acrimonious slime and foulness, which suffered to accumulate, never fails to injure and finally ruin them.
